Please note:

China will set up five new "super ministries", in a new round of government institutional restructuring. According to the plan, submitted to the NPC on 11 March and adopted on 15 March, the five new "super ministries" are the Ministry of Industry and Information (工业和信息化部), the Ministry of Human Resources and Social Security (人力资源和社会保障部), the Ministry of Environmental Protection (环境保护部), the Ministry of Housing and Urban-Rural Construction (住房和城乡建设部), and the Ministry of Transport (交通运输部). The National Energy Commission (国家能源委员会), a high-level inter-ministerial consultation and coordinating body, is also to be established, with a National Bureau of Energy (国家能源局) to be set up as its working office under the National Development and Reform Commission (NDRC). The new bureau will integrate the NDRC's functions relating to energy management, the functions of the National Energy Leading Group and the functions of the Commission of Science, Technology and Industry for National Defense (COSTIND) on nuclear power management. The Ministry of Industry and Information will integrate the NDRC's functions on industry and trade management, the functions of the COSTIND, except that on nuclear power management, and the functions of the Ministry of Information Industry and the State Council Informatization Office. A State Bureau of Science, Technology and Industry for National Defence (国家国防科技工业局) will be formed under the new ministry. The State Tobacco Monopoly Administration will be merged into the new ministry. The Ministry of Transport will incorporate the current Ministry of Communications, the Civil Aviation Administration of China (CAAC) and the section of urban traffic management under the Ministry of Construction. Under the new ministry will be a newly formed State Civil Aviation Bureau (国家民用航空局), and the State Post Bureau, previously under the Ministry of Information Industry. The Ministry of Human Resources and Social Security will combine the Ministry of Personnel and the Ministry of Labour and Social Security. Under the new ministry will be a newly formed State Bureau of Civil Servants (国家公务员局) and the State Administration of Foreign Experts Affairs. The State Environmental Protection Administration will be elevated to the Ministry of Environmental Protection. The new Ministry of Housing and Urban-Rural Construction will replace the Ministry of Construction. Meanwhile, the State Food and Drug Administration will be put under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Health. The reshuffle involves 15 government departments and reduces the number of Cabinet ministries and commissions to 27 (apart from the General Office), compared with the present 28. The proposed institutional restructuring is a continuation of the previous five major government reshuffles over the past 30 years, said State Councillor Hua Jianmin. China has formed a top-level leading group for the preparations of the Beijing Olympic Games headed by Xi Jinping, a senior leader of the Communist Party of China (CCP), said an official with the Games' organizing committee on 12 March. Xi is a member of the Standing Committee of the CCP CC Politburo. The two deputy heads of the group are Zhou Yongkang, also in the nine-member Politburo Standing Committee, and Liu Qi, Party secretary of Beijing and president of the Beijing Organizing Committee for the Games of the XXIX Olympiad (BOCOG), said Beijing Vice Mayor Liu Jingmin, also executive vice president of the BOCOG. (PDE, 12 Mar 08; SCMP, 13 Mar 08)

China has set up a state level headquarters to ensure the security of the forthcoming Olympics in Beijing, said a senior official of the Games' organizing committee on 12 March. ## PRC Laws and Regulations

The revised Water Pollution Prevention and Control Law was passed at the 32nd session of the 10th NPC Standing Committee on 28 February 2008. This law will take effect on 1 June 2008. (Presidential Decree No 87, signed by State President Hu Jintao on 28 February 2008) This law consists of eight chapters with 92 articles.

"Enterprise heads directly responsible for causing severe water pollution incidents and others with direct responsibility will be fined up to half of their income of the previous year," said the law. Enterprises would be held responsible for 30 per cent of the direct losses of any serious water pollution incident they cause and 20 per cent for incidents of medium consequences. Previously, corporate executives faced only administrative penalties. "The amount of fines should be imposed according to the severity of violations, and too little money cannot effectively tackle the long-standing problem of 'low violation cost'," said a statement of the NPC's Law Committee issued in December. The law also stipulated that the country would set up its water protection goal as well as an assessment system, which would be applied to local officials. Whether they reach the goal will be directly connected with their performance evaluation, according to the law. It allows environmental protection departments and relevant social organizations to support water pollution victims in lawsuits and the government encourages law firms and lawyers to provide legal aid to the victims. It added a provision to stipulate that the aquaculture industry should properly use nutrient feed in a bid to prevent over-nutrition. Water pollution is among the top environmental concerns of the Chinese government and the public. A 2006 survey found that surface water generally was classified as containing intermediate levels of pollution, but one third of the 744 samples tested were graded at the worst pollution rating. The State Environmental Protection Administration (SEPA) handled 161 emergency environmental pollution incidents in 2006, of which 59 per cent involved water pollution. (XNA, 28 Feb 08)

China has made public the Provisions on the Management of Qualification of Geological Prospectors on 10 March 2008, in effort to step up control over the qualification of the country's geological prospectors. These provisions will go into force in July. (Decree No. ? of the PRC State Council, signed by Wen Jiabao, Premier of the State Council, on 8 March 2008) It is aimed to safeguard and maintain order in the market of geological prospection, to ensure the quality of the prospection and promote the development of the business, according to the statute. It is composed of six parts regarding issues ranging from application, approval and supervision to responsibilities. According to the statute, the land resources administration department of the State Council, China's Cabinet, is responsible for approving the qualifications of geological prospectors. These involved investigation in the areas of sea and ocean, petroleum and gas, aerial survey and other A-class inspections. Provincial departments in charge of land resources have the right to approve lower-level prospectors. Authorities in charge of the approval of geological prospectors must set up files to record the experience, achievements, reputation, official appraisals, public complaints and law-breaking activities of the prospectors. Prospectors are not allowed to do things beyond their qualifications or make false reports on their work. They must also not lend their qualification to others. Officials who abuse their power to issue qualifications to unqualified institutions will be held responsible and punished in accordance with the law. (XNA, 10 Mar 08)

China on 13 March published the Provisions on the Management of Permit for Research and Manufacturing of Weapons and Armaments. It was jointly signed by President Hu Jintao, also the Central Military Commission chairman, and Premier Wen Jiabao.

The statute, in five articles and 43 clauses, is effective on April 1.

The government is cataloging all kinds of activities involving the study and manufacturing of weapons and armaments, exclusive of research on special weapons and armament, and will issue permission to those eligible researchers and manufacturers.

The catalogue was issued by the State Council department in charge of defence science, technology and industry, the General Armament Department of the Chinese People's Liberation Army (PLA), and authorities in charge of military electronics industry. It will be readjusted periodically.

In general, those who are not on the list will not be allowed to participate in these kind of activities, though some will be allowed to do so with permission of the State Council, China's Cabinet, and the Central Military Commission.

Eligible companies and individuals must acquire an official license, capabilities and qualifications for involvement in study and manufacturing of weapons and armaments, including the qualification for secrecy.

Those who want to apply for the official permit of studying and manufacturing weapons and armament should hand over their application to provincial-level departments in charge of defence science, technology and industry, or directly to the State Council department in charge of the sector.

The third article in the statute deals with the management of secrecy. It emphasized approved researchers and manufacturers must set up their managerial system on secrecy, with their leaders responsible for the issue. Individuals involved in these activities have to sign a responsibility statement on secrecy.

These research institutions and manufacturers must take strict measures for keeping secret and limiting the number of people directly involved in the secret job; protective facilities must be built to ensure the safety of the key departments and locations.

They are not allowed to handle, transmit and store secret data and information with equipment that is not designed for being kept secret. All relevant activities, including secret-leaking incidents, must be recorded and put into secret archives.

Those who are not in the catalogue will be punished for illegally participating in the study and manufacturing of weapons and armaments, with penalties ranging from 100 to 300 per cent of the value of the illegally-manufactured products. All illegal income will be confiscated.

Eligible units who lease, lend or transfer in other means their license will pay a fine of 100,000 yuan (about 14,000 US dollars), or their license could be revoked if their wrongdoing is severe. Those who use the license of others will have to pay penalties ranging from 100 to 300 per cent of the value of the illegal products, and have their illegal income seized.

Those who falsify a license or obtain a license by illicit means, including fraudulence and bribery, will also be penalized. Officials in charge of the issuance of the said license will be punished for malfeasance.

Those who have had their license revoked would not be allowed to apply for a new one within three years. (XNA, 13 Mar 08)
